My name is Amanda Barberena and I am a sophomore at Michigan State University. I am studying Media and Information and I am minoring in Public Relations.

I am currently working at NPR station WKAR as the All Things Considered Intern, as a teaching assistant for a beginning public relations writing class, and as a producer at radio station The Spartan Sports Network.

I am a member of the MSU Chapter of the Society of News Design, PRSSA, and The Wharton Center Student Marketing Organization.

During my sophomore year, I was also a designer for Dialogue Detroit and I wrote articles for an online advertising and public relations newsletter called The Brief.

In my free time, I love hiking (especially at Pictured Rocks or Hocking Hills), eating chocolate chip cookies, and watching movies with my friends and family.

My Writing

Unlike Ferris Bueller, MSU Student Aaron Applebey Never Takes a Day Off

Written by Amanda Barberena

“Aaron Applebey, you’re my hero.”

At least, that was what Applebey imagined his boss would say if he completed the project. But first, he would have to get a float; a float capable of holding flowers, Christmas trees, an accordion, characters in German costumes... and Ferris Bueller.

How was he going to pull this off?

From Portage, Michigan, Applebey now calls Michigan State University his home eight months of the year. Applebey is a junior studying Media and Information. He was originally drawn to MSU for the film program, but has been pulled toward another field: public relations.

“Right now, I’m kind of caught between the two worlds of fiction filmmaking and public relations,” said Applebey with a divided expression. He is minoring in both subjects and wants to follow both career paths, but also wishes he could focus all of his energy on just one.
